The tariff is also available at Business Service and Support Offices upon presentation of the Deeplink in the Yandex Pro application.

Monthly subscription fee deduction and allowance allocation:

- The subscriber's tariff activation date is considered the monthly subscription fee deduction date.
- Upon a new activation, the monthly subscription fee is charged in full (without proration), and all allowances are granted in full, provided that the subscriber's balance is sufficient.
- If the balance is insufficient or negative, the monthly subscription fee is not deducted, the included allowances are not granted, and no debt is created on the subscriber's account.
- The next monthly subscription fee is deducted once every month from the date of the last successful subscription fee deduction.
- The next subscription fee deduction date is the date of the last successful subscription fee deduction under the tariff plan.
- The monthly subscription fee and allowance allocation are performed between 00:00 and 08:00 (the exact deduction time is not fixed). The subscriber must have sufficient funds in the account for the subscription fee to be deducted in full.
- The monthly subscription fee is charged once a month from the date of the last successful deduction of the monthly subscription fee under the tariff plan. The date of the next monthly subscription fee deduction is the date of the last successful subscription fee deduction under the tariff plan (if the subscription fee deduction date is the 31st day of the month and the following month has 30, 29 or 28 days, the next monthly subscription fee will be deducted on the 30th day of the month or on the 28th/29th day of February. If the subscription fee under the tariff plan is paid on time (the subscriber's number remains continuously in the active status), the subsequent monthly subscription fee will be deducted on the 31st day of the month).

- If, at the time of the monthly subscription fee deduction, the subscriber's balance is insufficient to cover the subscription fee, the subscriber's number will be blocked. The subscription fee will not be deducted until the subscriber's balance is sufficient to cover the monthly subscription fee in full.

- The monthly subscription fee will be deducted immediately after the subscriber's balance is replenished with a sufficient amount to cover the monthly subscription fee in full. Once the subscription fee has been deducted, the subscriber's number will return to the active status and the allowances provided under the tariff plan will be assigned. Thereafter, the subscription fee will be deducted according to the subscriber's new monthly billing period, i.e. once every month from the date of the last successful subscription fee deduction under the tariff plan.
